this.

I send you my best.

Richard E. Neustadt

Hon. Nicholas deB. Katzenbach
Under Secretary of State
Department of State
Washington, D.C.

Signed in Mr. Neustadt's absence.

Those in government who worked with Bobby came to love him. That is a rare thing. Often an able, courageous, competent man can gain the admiration, respect, and loyalty of his colleagues. But love is another thing. I don't think I can explain it. But it was true. And we liked ourselves better for loving him.

I knew Bob best in our four years together in the Justice Department. ~~Recollections of Bob tumble one upon another and are hard to order.~~ But I knew too that there were many Bob Kennedys. He moved easily from one group of people to another - people who had nothing in common except ^{readily with} Bobby. For a man who was essentially shy and reticent he had an amazing number of genuine friends from all walks of life.

I knew Bob best - because I saw him most - in our four years together in the Justice Department. They were years of accomplishment, very hard work, camaraderie and belief. I doubt any group of people have ever worked better together or been better led.

Recollections of Bob during those years tumble one upon another and are hard to order. What comes through is Bob's courage, his compassion, his curiosity and determination to understand as well as to do - and, of course, his sense of humor.

How Bob came to be called "ruthless" by so many puzzled and distressed all his friends as I am sure it did him, too. The Bobby we all knew was the absolute opposite. What moved him more than anything else was a passionate compassion for those less fortunate than himself. ~~Now in his Bob~~ ~~liked to win because he didn't like to lose.~~ This motivated everything that he did and everything he tried to do as Attorney General.

Civil rights, of course; but what the white southern opposition never really understood were the fantastic efforts he made to persuade ^{not} to coerce, to understand the difficulties of white and black alike. He had a clear vision of what had to come to pass but he didn't underestimate its difficulties or remain oblivious to the passionate feelings of others. Because he was not ruthless - because he disliked to use power in its raw form - we probably made mistakes at Ole Miss. And he regarded our having to resort to armed force as a defeat, not a victory.

Justice for the poor - making the ^{criminal justice} ~~justice~~ system more understanding and more involved in the problems of the forgotten and helpless. It was Bob - not the Supreme Court - who put the Justice Department in the front ranks of working for justice. The Allen Committee on Poverty at the law; reform of our bail system; halfway houses; juvenile delinquency; an office of Criminal Justice. This is not ^{only} a list of accomplishments; it's a ~~monument~~ ^{testimony} to feeling for other people.

Oddly enough his anger at organized crime and even his approval of anti-trust reflected the same motivation. In both cases his view was compassionate at to the victim and without vindictiveness as to the perpetrator. He got no joy from a conviction of even the worst offender. It was important that the case was won, that the guilty were proven guilty. But it went no further - even in the Jimmy Hoffa. There was no joy in the suffering of another, ^{human being} ~~however~~ just his deserts.

Perhaps less obvious than his compassion and his courage to do what he thought right was his extraordinary curiosity. He was always probing for why people felt differently than he did. He wanted to know and understand - on the matters he thought important - why people had the attitudes they did. He liked to listen; he liked to experience; he wanted to participate. I think the mutual respect which he shared with the best reporters was based on this common curiosity to know and to comprehend. And while he talked about ideas and policies and issues people were really central to his own thinking. Why a person said or did something was a constant source of interest and curiosity which led to understanding.

His humor was quiet, sardonic - turned inward on himself or those he identified with. When the Senate confirmed me ^{in record time} as Assistant Attorney General in a job I had described as "the Attorney General's lawyer" he telephoned to congratulate me, saying "I guess they thought I needed a lawyer in a hurry." Before I went to Alabama to "confront" George Wallace, "Well, if you can manage to get yourself killed it would give us a helluva moral issue." Or when, talking to John Doe ^{who he had sent to} Birmingham ^{over rights} during a crisis, he said "John - I saw your children at school today. It was Father's Day. You should be ashamed of yourself." He wasn't a story teller; the humor was of and about the immediate - the "in joke". And it made you feel "in" and warm in the sharing.

Bob was never mean and never petty. It must have been hard for a man who felt so deeply to have curbed the desire to answer back in anger, ^{not} to use the power he had ~~to~~ in small ways. But it just wasn't his way of doing things. He brooded sometimes, but he always brooded about the future.

The other night we had a family sharing of "Robert Kennedy Remembered." My eight-year old daughter Anne was the first to speak after the kind of silence which must come after remembering. She said "Daddy, do you remember when he sent me a letter all roses in the hospital." I died. Amy is many other memories of a extraordinary person, who gave so much to

It was a great memory for her — all for me. (4)

Please take care of him who tried to take care of yours.

"Aeschylus wrote: 'In our sleep, pain that cannot forget falls drop by drop upon the heart and in our own despair, against our will, comes wisdom through the awful grace of God.'"

"What we need in the United States . . . is love and wisdom and compassion toward one another, and a feeling of justice toward those who still suffer within our own country, whether they be white or they be black.

"Let us dedicate ourselves to what the Greeks wrote so many years ago: to tame the savageness of man and make gentle the life of the world. Let us dedicate ourselves to that, and say a prayer for our country and for our people."

Dear Nick:

These are harrowing times for us all but particularly for those who had been close to Senator Kennedy, professionally and personally, as had you.

Whatever one's political views no one could deny that Robert Kennedy was a young man of brilliant performance and still more brilliant promise.

We are the worse off, we Americans, not only for his loss but for the shame of how he was taken away.

We are thinking of you and

One does not know how or what to write these days. So, I am simply writing to you and to John Douglas to say that a lot of us who were not "for" Senator Robert Kennedy are very sad and very dismayed. I know you were close to him and thought highly of him. Hence, this message of condolence goes to you, as a way of expressing the feelings of outrage, of grief, and of respect which Americans share.

Most of all, we would like to convey our feelings to the Kennedy family.

Dear Nick:

On behalf of the family, I am writing to ask your help in putting together a short book of recollections about my brother, Bobby. The book is to be privately printed and to be given only to the immediate family and a few very close friends as well as to those who, like yourself, have contributed to it.

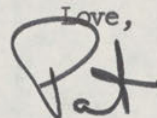

The purpose of the book will be to record the intimate anecdotes and personal recollections of those who have known Bobby over the years. In this way, we hope to preserve for Ethel and his children a picture of the way he was and why we loved him so much.

It would be wonderful if you could put down your thoughts about Bobby, perhaps stressing any particular vignettes that paint a vivid picture of him as you knew him. In terms of length, 800 to 1,000 words would be about right. It will, of course, be necessary to do some selecting among material received as well as some editing, which I hope you will not mind, but every contribution will be immensely valuable to the family and deeply appreciated by us.

In the book, we hope to capture Bobby's humor, his warmth, his deep commitment to his country, his family, and his friends, as well as the way he grew in wisdom and understanding over the years in the course of meeting and knowing so many people from all walks of life and in all parts of the world.

We would like to have the book ready around Bobby's birthday in November so it would be much appreciated if you would put pen to paper in the next month or so. You could send your piece to me, c/o the Park Agency, 200 Park Avenue, New York City, which is the family office.

You will be happy to know that Ethel and the children are doing fine, aside from the usual confusion. We all send our best wishes to you and our thanks in advance for your contribution to the book.

Dear Nick:

You were very kind to take the time and trouble to send me your thoughts on a living memorial for Bob, and let me thank you for myself, for Ethel, and for our whole family.

I have discussed your suggestions with Ethel and a number of others, over the length of summer, and after considerable thought we have settled on what we all think is an appropriate form for the Memorial. I have enclosed a short memorandum outlining its purposes and structure.

I would, of course, welcome any comments you might have on it, and let me thank you again for your help.

With my warm regards.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Kennedy hopes that until our deliberations on a suitable memorial are complete, the attached information is kept among us.

MEMORANDUM

THE ROBERT F. KENNEDY LIVING MEMORIAL

From the beginning of the discussions among Robert Kennedy's family, friends and associates on the form of a Memorial in his name, there was wide agreement that he should be remembered in a living memorial -- one which would embody his commitment to "passion and action in the service of the Nation." There was also wide agreement that the Memorial should be able to act in many of the fields in which he had a special interest: among the poor, among young people, and among all those who seek a better future for others. As the discussions proceeded, it was also clear that the Memorial should not be overly restrictive; that it should represent as many as possible of all his varied concerns -- international as well as domestic, individual excellence as well as mass welfare.

Many specific ideas were advanced to fulfill these general principles. Fellowships for young leaders, community organization work among the poor, day camps and pre-school efforts for poor children, international exchanges, prizes and awards for outstanding achievement, special schools and universities -- all these and others were offered, and all were felt to be appropriate tributes to the memory of Robert Kennedy.

None, however, were felt by themselves to be sufficient, either as representing the extraordinary range of Robert Kennedy's interests, or as self-sufficient contributions to the needs of the day. Nor did any single idea commend itself as one to which a living memorial might best devote its attention five or ten years from now, when we are sure to face new problems -- problems of which we know only that they will be different from what we see today. Finally, no single specific project suggestion could offer, by itself, an opportunity for the participation of the hundreds and thousands of people who worked for John Kennedy and Robert Kennedy -- people who have shown, again and again, that they want to continue making their contribution to the causes we have all shared these past years.

The Robert Kennedy Memorial we have decided upon combines all the excellent suggestions we received, in a way which we believe meets all the relevant tests. It will be incorporated in the form of a small foundation with an active Board and staff, drawn principally from those who were most closely associated with the Senator and his work during his lifetime. It will be the aim of this Foundation to work as he did -- as a catalyst in the solution of pressing public problems. Rather than itself attempt to "solve" any given problem, it will attempt to bring together, on a case-by-case basis, the resources, people and organization necessary. In the Bedford-Stuyvesant project, for example, Robert Kennedy brought together foundation and government funds; leaders of the business community; and leaders and organizations from the Bedford-Stuyvesant area, to mount a major attack on the problems of poverty, housing, education, and so on, in the large and neglected community. Funds for this project became available not out of charity, nor because of the Kennedy name; they were made available because he identified a basic need; came up with a plan that gave real promise of meeting that need; and then went out and found the people who could make that plan a reality.

This is what we hope the Memorial Foundation can do -- not just in the field of poverty, but in education, in the care of the afflicted, in the control of crime and violence; perhaps not just in our own country, but also making a contribution to the problems of less fortunate peoples abroad. The Memorial Foundation, following his lead, would attempt to stimulate and bring forward new ideas for meeting these problems; seek out the foundation, government, and other funds necessary and available for their solution, at least on a pilot-project basis; and perhaps most important of all, enlist the energies and talents of those concerned and able people who can make the ideas work.

The Memorial Foundation itself would not carry out specific projects, but would form, or help in the formation of, new and separate organizations for each specific area of action. In this regard, discussions are already underway with foundation and other people, as the Memorial's first such effort, on the foundation of a Community Improvement Corporation, to encourage the self-development, in large part on the Bedford-Stuyvesant model, of (ultimately) dozens of poverty communities. This Community Improvement Corporation would have its own funding sources, its own board, and its own activities; the contribution of the Memorial would be as a catalyst in aiding its formation, helping to give it some initial direction, and associating itself with the effort over a period of time.

It is our belief and our determination that the Memorial Foundation can, over the years, encourage and assist in the formation of many such efforts, enlisting the energies of thousands of first-rate people, in a variety of fields of need. It can do so only if the Foundation concentrates on providing catalytic energies, and does not become an operating agency in and of itself. Thus, we intend that the Memorial Foundation shall spin off to local, independent operation, to as high a degree as possible, the specific projects whose creation it stimulates.

Dear Dick

As you are away, and I am leaving for Europe, and Nancy Tuckerman is on vacation - I do not know how to send this letter to Prince Sihanouk - thanking him for the cable which he sent me at the time of Bobby's death.

I always used to send my letters to Prince Sihanouk to Bob McNamara -

As I must also write to thank the Cambodian Representative to the United Nations, whose letter was the very first I received - (he delivered it to my apartment before I was back from California) - I am sending the letter for Monseigneur to him -

But as I would not wish to do anything without the State Department's knowing of it - I send you a copy of my letter to Prince Sihanouk, and of his cable to me.

Every word of my letter to him is absolutely true and I hope someone on the Cambodian desk finds it interesting that the first person I should hear from in the United States is the Cambodian Representative to the UN, and the first person from overseas Prince Sihanouk -

always affectionately

Monsieur -

La première lettre que j'ai reçu après la mort de Robert Kennedy était celle de Son Excellence Huot Sambath, votre Ambassadeur à l'O.N.U. à New York.

Et le premier message d'outremer que j'ai reçu, c'était le votre, Monsieur.

J'en étais si profondément touchée. Pouvez-vous vous imaginer quelle place le Cambodge tient dans mon cœur?

Je pense aux paroles émouvantes de votre discours au moment de l'Inauguration de L'Avenue du Président Kennedy à Sihanoukville - "il a éclairé un temps trop court notre monde d'une lumière qui ne s'est jamais rallumée, et qui nous manque cruellement aujourd'hui".

Je vous remercie d'avoir associé dans un même hommage la mémoire de Robert Kennedy et de son frère - de m'avoir dit qu'il partageait son courage et sa foi en la justice pour tous les peuples, pour tous les hommes.

Aux pires moments de l'existence, il y a une chose qui nous reste — l'espoir. C'est une très faible et petite flamme. Mais quand il y a au monde des hommes de cœur et de sensibilité comme vous, Monseigneur, qui peuvent m'envoyer le premier, avant tous mes amis au monde, ce message si humain de confort, — quand nos pays n'ont pas de relations, cela m'aide à garder mon espoir.

J'espère, Monseigneur, que nous verrons dans nos jours un meilleur monde — que tous ces morts, dans ma famille, dans votre partie du monde, n'auraient pas été en vain.

Je vous remercie du plus profond de mon cœur, pour votre sympathie.

Je ne l'oublierai jamais -

He ascended into heaven, and sits at the right hand of God, the Father almighty;

I believe in the Holy Ghost, the holy catholic church, the communion of saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the body, and life everlasting. Amen.

All respond: It is right and just.

All recite with Celebrant:

Holy, holy, holy Lord God of hosts.

COMMUNION: All respond (whether receiving or not): "Lord, I am not worthy that You should come under my roof. Speak but the word, and my soul will be healed."

Song Refrain: What would You have us do, we who claim to be Your followers?
What would you have us do, we who say we live Your life?
What would you have us do, we who want to serve? What would You have us do?

1. Christ, You walked upon this clay. And cared for all that's man.
You fleshed the life, the truth, the way; Now guide us in Your plan.
2. Yes, man has done such great deeds; yet wars for peace are fought.
For all we've done, life seethes with needs; we're caught confused in thought.
3. Where our cities cast their shadows, our churches shine like jewels;
But our brothers die in ghettos and in segregated schools.

Psalm 23: Song Refrain: My Shepherd is the Lord, nothing indeed shall I want.

1. My shepherd is the Lord; there is nothing I shall want. - Fresh and green are the pastures where He gives me repose. - Near restful waters He leads me, to revive my drooping spirit.
2. He guides me along the right path; He is true to His name. - If I should walk in the valley of darkness, no evil would I fear. - You are there with Your crook and Your staff; with these You give me comfort.
3. You have prepared a banquet for me in the sight of my foes.
My head You have anointed with oil; my cup is overflowing.
4. Surely goodness and kindness shall follow me all the days of my life.
In the Lord's own house shall I dwell... for ever and ever!

AFTER COMMUNION: Hymn

1. My God, how wonderful Thou art! Thy Majesty how bright!
How beautiful Thy mercy seat. In depths of burning light!
2. O God, our help in ages past, Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast, And our eternal home.
3. How wonderful, how beautiful
The sight of Thee must be,
Thine endless wisdom, boundless power
And shining purity!
4. O God, our help in ages past, Our hope for years to come,
Be Thou our guide while troubles last, And our eternal home.

RECESSIONAL SONG:

1. We are one in the Spirit. We are one in the Lord, We are one in the Spirit,
We are one in the Lord,... and we pray that all unity may one day be restored.

Song Refrain: And They'll know we are Christians by our love, by our love, Yes, they'll know we are Christians by our love.

2. We will walk with each other, We will walk hand in hand, We will walk with each other,
We will walk hand in hand, And together we'll spread the news that God is in our land!
3. We will work with each other, We will work side by side, We will work with each other,
We will work side by side, and we'll guard each man's dignity and save each man's pride.
4. All praise to the Father, From whom all things come, And all praise to Christ Jesus,
His only Son, and All praise to the Spirit, who makes us one.

AGENDA

1. General Questions:

Will the family grant permission for non-Catholic press to say prayers at the Cathedral during public viewing hours? Such procedure was followed with Cardinal Spellman's funeral.

Are we correct in assuming that except for times specified for private family viewing, the church may remain open whenever there are people waiting outside?

What time should the main mass on Saturday be - 10 or 10.30?

Shall we position our ushers at stationary posts, to be assisted by St. Patrick's Cathedral's ushers?

We have been told that Mrs. John Kennedy made arrangements for flowers to be handled by Mrs. Bunny Mellon and for music to be handled by Leonard Bernstein? Is this correct?

How shall we inform family and close friends of arrangements as they are made? What particulars do they need to know?

We are not yet certain of who the celebrants will be at the Saturday mass. Suggestions thus far have been: Father MacSorley and Father Perera from McLean; Archbishop Cook and Cavanaugh from Notre Dame.

Will the casket be open? If so, an honor guard is required. From what services should it be drawn?

As part of the vigil, should there be included service academy appointments made by RFK, members of the 2505th Brigade Special Forces?

If an honor guard is decided upon, should they serve in that?

At the main mass on Saturday, where will Mrs. Kennedy and family and other close friends enter - through the rear or at 5th Avenue? We are assuming that at all other times, they will enter through the Bishop's house on Madison Avenue as requested by the Secret Service.

Bob Fitzgerald asks what arrangements should be made for Peter Lawford and in what ways he should be included?

an
Should there be/auxilliary sound system established at the church so that the mass can be heard by any overflow crowd?

Would the family like a private service on Saturday morning from 7.30-8.30?

In addition - if the family has no objection -on the Friday evening, at 7 or 8 o'clock, Archbishop Cook will offer special prayers.

2. Who should be invited - first to the funeral; second on the train; more specifically, should President Johnson, Mrs. Johnson, Vice President Humphrey be invited? The general question of who should be invited will be resolved after consideration of lists submitted by Lou Oberdorfer on a national basis, Carter Burden for New York, and requests and ideas from family members and others on the plane:
3. The mechanical arrangements necessary to deliver invitations will be resolved by the people on the attached list after the names of invitees are decided. Shall there be different color tickets for the funeral; for the train; shall there be identification badges for the funeral and train? The police have requested samples of tickets to the funeral as soon as possible? Jerry Cummins should supply those when printed.
4. The questions pertaining to physical arrangements and movement of the family, the coffin or the party accompanying it. Following the funeral, it has been proposed that the cortege of cars containing the hearse and the family cars leave immediately; by buses containing the rest of the party to travel in the train, proceed to Penn station separately. It has been suggested by the railroad that the train be split at Union Station so that the press and others, except for the family and close friends, arrive and unload first. Is this acceptable?

How shall the cars containing family and close friends be brought to the Saturday mass? Shall they meet at some other point and arrive together?
How many will there be in the group that will arrive with Mrs. RFK for the Saturday mass?
What special arrangements in outfitting should be made for the baggage car containing the casket and for the outside of the train for identification .

What arrangements for the press - we are proceeding under the assumption that no stops will be desired between New York and Washington, but that the train will slow down to approx. 5 miles per hour as it passes through major stations along the route.
5. General questions of security.

MEMORANDUM FOR: The Honorable
 Nicholas deB Katzenbach
 Under Secretary of State

I am enclosing representative press comment on the aftermath of the assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

You will note the number of editorials condemning the tendency to characterize the United States as a "sick and violent society" because of the act of the assassin. It was gratifying to see that our efforts met with considerable success in these countries.

AFTERMATH
of
SENATOR ROBERT F. KENNEDY

(A selection of foreign editorial comment)

AFTERMATH OF THE ASSASSINATION
OF SENATOR ROBERT F. KENNEDY

Following initial shock and anger at the June 5, 1968 assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy, press comment in many countries developed a more moderate tone. A number of editorials deplored the tendency to condemn the U.S. generally as a sick and violent society because of the act of one man. Commentators pointed to violence in their own and other countries too, and affirmed that the U.S. is not a nation of assassins. Some editorials expressed faith in the U.S., its principles and leadership, and recalled American contributions to the defense and economic development of other nations.

Here is an account, with excerpts, of this vein of foreign press reaction.

Austria: "America Retains Moral Leadership"

Austria's independent Salzburger Nachrichten, the country's leading provincial daily, said that commentaries and suspicions regarding the assassination had assumed "absurd proportions....The arrogance shown by wholesale condemnation of a nation is equal to the arrogance of political murderers who believe they can conduct politics with bullets."

The paper asserted that the question was being asked in Western Europe whether "the U.S. still has a title to moral leadership of the free West. The answer can only be an unconditional yes."

In Vienna, independent Die Presse argued that "anyone who knows the U.S. knows that America is not a nation of assailants."

The paper judged that the President's naming of the commission on violence "gives evidence of an earnest endeavor to find, and possibly cut, the roots of violence."

Socialist Neue Zeit of Graz said many people believe that violence is an exclusively American tragedy, but "it is not only on the American political scene that violent methods have been firmly established.

"A few weeks ago we saw an attempt in West Germany to murder a student named Dutschke. There was barricade fighting in German cities, with fatalities....Those who saw on their television screens what has occurred in the last few weeks in Paris, Rome and Warsaw, to name only a few centers, know about the critical condition of our society."

Belgium: "Avoid Generalizations"

In Belgium, Senate President Paul Struye wrote in a front-page article in conservative Libre Belgique, Brussels, that "hasty and unfair generalizations" regarding the Los Angeles tragedy should be avoided:

"From earliest

"From earliest times to the present, political crimes have been committed not only in the U.S. but in almost all countries.... Thus it is unfair to accuse 'the American way of life' or 'international fascism' of having a monopoly on criminal violence....

"Although some aspects of U.S. society are open to criticism.... it would be unjust to deny that among the basic foundations of American political philosophy are respect for freedom of opinion, human rights, man's right to express the widest variety of opinions, including those contrary to the administration in power, and above all respect for man's right to live.

"These are not principles that encourage or foster resort to violence. American political tradition therefore is less to blame than the mistakes and gaps that seem to exist in the adoption of preventive measures to reduce crime in general, not just political crime."

Netherlands: "Too Serious for Simplification"

A leading Dutch columnist, Godfried Bomans, discussed in Amsterdam's Volkskrant the European view of the United States since World War Two:

"Just after the liberation, thousands of Americans were killed on our behalf, and we regarded the Americans highly. This favorable American image increased even more as a result of the Marshall Plan, and we called the Americans generous, humanitarian and unselfish. But then the decline came, and Americans suddenly found themselves at a low point.

"Vietnam and the race problem have contributed to this declining American image. It is becoming commonplace to smash windows of American Consulates. The U.S. image plunged even further as a result of the King and Kennedy assassinations. Add to this Dutch television's preoccupation with America's sore spots during the past year and it is almost difficult to assume that there is still someone decent living over there.

"Because of these recent developments, the view that a bunch of murderers are living in America is becoming generally accepted." I quote one sentence that you might have read in this paper: 'Murder takes the place of an old-fashioned punch in the nose, and a bullet is considered an argument in political debate.'

"I take the liberty to say that these sweeping statements are just as regrettable and even more dangerous than the assassination itself. It is unfair to attribute the act of one man, who moreover is a Jordanian immigrant, to an entire people. Such simplifications may be an easy way out, but at the high price of price of rejecting an entire nation. What is happening in the U.S. is too serious a matter for such a simplified interpretation."

Norway: "The USA is Not a Violent Land"

Columnist Sverre Munck in Oslo's Morgenposten compared the meaning of violence in the East and in the West:

"The USA is not a violent nation. To the contrary. A violent state is one which with terror and policy not only suppresses its own population, but also uses the same methods, police, aggression and armed force to suppress freedom in other nations. At present there are two outstanding violent nations in the world, namely [Communist] China and the Soviet Union. From these two countries terror and the mentality of violence spread into countries in both East and West....'How many murders have there been at the Berlin Wall?'"

Elsewhere in Europe, Nazione of Florence said:

"America, of course, is no paradise. Like all human societies it has its various plagues. It would be easy to list them, for the Americans themselves tick the list off for us....

"We resent it when the Sicilian Mafia is regarded as typical of Italy....We in our turn cannot and must not confuse Oswald, Ruby, Sirhan or 'gangsterism' with America."

Socialist Avanti of Rome saw America as a land of gigantic proportions, good as well as bad:

"Yes, maybe America is the land of violence and aggression but....it is also the land which twice in the first half of this century found the moral strength to send the flower of its youth to die for European freedom....It was the only victor nation (in World War Two) with the force to renounce reparationsAnd it is the land which gave us Kennedy and his adversaries just as it gave us Lincoln and his assassins. It is the land where everything is of gigantic proportions....Robert Kennedyfell....at the hands of a young Jordanian to whom America had opened the doors of hospitality."

London's Daily Telegraph attempted to balance the picture of the United States:

"In few countries of the world are the style and temper of politics usually more civilized, the courtesies of debate more generally observed, opponents more tolerant of each other [than] in the U.S.]. That all this should be smirched and obscured by the crimes of a few is unfair...."

Canada: "A

Canada: "A Minority of Extremists"

In Canada, Montreal's independent La Presse said that "we are not prepared to throw rocks at the American people....In that great republic as elsewhere it is a minority of extremists who despise the rights of others and sow hate and terror."

A similar note was sounded by the Ottawa Journal:

"A nation as a whole cannot be indicted for its madmen.... political assassination is not indigenous to the U.S."

Buenos Aires: 200 Million Cannot Be Judged

Buenos Aires' La Nacion declared:

"It would be a malevolent mistake to assume that a nation of 200 million can be judged by the behavior of a small group of hot-heads."

Also in Buenos Aires, Clarín commented:

"We must trust in the instincts of the American people and the resolve of their leaders to face this great crisis...."

"We do not share the pessimism of columnists who predict that only the non-Negroes, the non-poor, the non-young -- the conformists and apologists of the status quo -- will vote in the November elections."

"The nation of Lincoln and John Kennedy trusts that from the twin graves in Arlington a call will rise for peace in justice which no assassin can strike down."

Santiago: U.S. Seeks Social Change

Chile's leading daily, El Mercurio, affirmed that "since the assassination, in the U.S. as in the rest of the world, a force that desires change persists."

"But it must be noted that the changes being urged in the U.S. imply only a perfecting of what exists -- the purifying of a democratic system, not its destruction or replacement."

"After the emotional shock of last week, the tendency to favor change will take on irresistible impetus."

Official La Nacion, speculating on America's future as a world power, said "even its worst enemies would view its end as a political disaster."

India: The

India: The Demands of a Democracy

New Delhi's Hindustan Times found that the assassination did not entitle others to indulge in a self-righteous reaction, and that an authoritarian social system did not gain by comparison:

"Reactions to the misfortunes that have recently struck the United States and France have often assumed a self-righteous tinge. When rich and powerful nations are humbled in one way or other, it is natural for those that are poorer to take satisfaction from the thought that economic advancement does not necessarily imply overall superiority. To the extent that such reactions make us in India, for instance, more appreciative of the positive achievements of our country, they are justifiable. It is profitable to be reminded of the virtues of a society in which a candidate can campaign for a major office without fearing for his life, or one in which domestic discontent does not paralyze the entire country.

"To go beyond this, however, is unwarranted, both in respect of a correct appreciation of the happenings in France and the U.S. and of possible lessons that can be learned from them....

"Reactions to Senator Robert Kennedy's slaying can also be diverted into unwarranted channels. It should not be forgotten that he -- like Dr. Martin Luther King and President John Kennedy before him -- exposed himself to danger because a democratic society requires a leader to carry public opinion with him. This does not excuse Congressional reluctance to restrict the sale of firearms, or the trend towards glorifying the cult of violence in the U.S. But it does not justify the assumption that social conditions are healthier in authoritarian states in which the rulers do not have to come into close contact with the ruled and in which stability is enforced by a mass of restrictions on individual freedom, backed by the memory of the liquidation of millions who did not conform immediately to the latest twist in the party line."

Malaysian Confidence in U.S.

Berita Minggu of Kuala Lumpur judged that "change goes on; there are no forces, however strong, that can stop the changes that are taking place in the U.S. toward improvement, justice and equality."

Utusan Melayu affirmed that "his death will not result in the abandonment of his inspiration and the basis of his struggle. We hope his death will serve as evidence to all mankind that violence and terrorism will ultimately fail."

Berita Harian said:

Berita Harian said:

"The death of Senator Robert Kennedy has led many Americans to condemn violence, and call for its complete elimination in their country. This should be so, but how?

"There is nothing that can completely prevent all forms of violence and killings that are a feature not only in the U.S. but also in other countries in the world....

"Violence is not exclusively American. There is no country that is free from man's savagery against man....but savagery cannot keep man from pressing forward -- as the Americans also show us."

Ghana: "Wrong to Blame the American Nation"

In Accra's Kumasi Pioneer, columnist Kwame Kesse-Adu discussed the death of Senator Kennedy and concluded by saying, "It would be wrong to blame the American nation for the assassination....just as it would be wrong to hold a whole nation responsible for the criminal act of a single citizen."

Dear General Clifton:

I want to add my own gratitude to the expressions of thanks I know you will be receiving from the Kennedy family for your magnificent performance during the difficult days last week. Dear Mr. Shaw:

I should personally like to thank you and the members of your staff for their invaluable help during the Kennedy funeral. I know that many members of your staff were involved in the preparations and management of the funeral and I hope you will pass on my heartfelt thanks to all of them.

We all owe a particular debt of gratitude to Mr. Eugene Ricketts, who did a superb job of keeping us informed of the funeral train's progress. We could not have managed without him, and I would appreciate it if you could tell him how much we all valued his help.

With warm regards,

Sincerely,

Dear Lou:

Attached is a list of the people--largely Government--I think should receive thanks from the Kennedy family. I have given you a sentence or two on what each of them did.

I suggest you check this list with Herb Schmertz, who should be able to submit a much longer list of people with whom he dealt.

I also suggest that letters be sent to the Directors of the choirs of the Navy and Harvard Bands. I can't help you with the names of either of the Band leaders, but the man who directed the choir is Norman Schribner of the Choral Arts Society of Washington.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Katzenbach:

Before leaving Washington, I wish to thank you for your kindness and warm welcome during my visit to Washington. Let me say that, along with fellow Europeans, I share the deepest sympathy for all Americans for the tragic loss of a distinguished American, Robert F. Kennedy.

Sincerely yours,

Saturday morning

Dear Nick:--

Some thoughtful person -- perhaps you -- was responsible for inviting Mary and myself to the Requiem Mass last night. On reflection, I just did not feel that we could do it and have me do justice to proper materials for the Secretary, Averall, and Cy for their meeting with the President and to my commencement date at Hill School tonight and tomorrow. Moreover, we had to see Michael off this morning on a summer of trying to place Negro students in colleges. I feel badly not to have gone, nonetheless, and above all want to thank those ~~you~~ who thought of us.

Teddy's remarks were magnificent, and could stand as the Commencement Address for us all at this moment of horror and renewed dedication. Bob stood for the great and big things, and his impact will go on.

There are no words to express one's feelings toward the family, but our hearts are almost equally with you and Bob, Lydia, the Lewises, and all who had the special human bond Bob inspired in so many.

We shall be at the Vineyard for a few days after the Yale Commencement, but I can come back right away if needed.

Yours are,

Bill

MOST OF the others who will speak here today can add, from their own close personal association with Robert Francis Kennedy, to our appreciation of his character as a man and his contribution to our public life. If we were to share time in proportion to our intimacy with Senator Kennedy, I would already have been silenced. Yet the role that he played in the designation of the John Fitzgerald Kennedy School of Government as Harvard's memorial to his brother was a crucial one, and in that role — as trivial as it may seem on the stage of the world events in which he was a leading actor — I had some reason to appreciate the qualities which we may well recognize as we meet today in his memory.

For the past few days a national torrent of eloquence has paid tribute to his courage and his compassion. But for him these were not only the virtues of a brave and good man — they were the virtues of the citizen, a citizen who is aware of his own high talents and determined to use them for the public good. It is easy either for a man of wealth and social status, or for a young rebel against injustice — and he was both — to assume an attitude of superiority to public service and especially to the kind that involves a perpetual contest for power, namely, politics. But such a moral posture was not to his taste. He sought not only power but the responsibility that should go with it, and that can convert power from a source of corruption to an instrument of brotherhood. It was this union of power with compassionate public purposes, this insistence on facing hard facts with a tender conscience, that I took him to mean by the phrase that he used on the last night of his campaign — "the politics of reality."

Although he received plenty of advice in the process, it was Robert Kennedy's decision that the memorial to his brother, President Kennedy, should be more than a monument and more than an archive of past accomplishments — should be, indeed, an institution to encourage and foster the kind of public service to which he and his family had been dedicated. And it was his personal decision — at least it was without benefit of any agreement from his advisers, for he knew when it was important to wait for a consensus and when it was essential to accept responsibility and to act — to help Harvard University establish as the living memorial to his brother the Kennedy School of Government.

It was at the point of this decision, four years ago this summer, that I found no basis for the political legend of Robert Kennedy's arrogance and ruthlessness. In a fundamental sense, a politician most surely reveals arrogance by showing a greater respect for power and status than for truth and learning, or by seeking to manipulate the institutions of education in the interest of political advantage. Among political leaders of various parties and all shades of opinion, I have never known one who showed more complete understanding of the need for the independence of academic institutions and for the integrity of scholarship, or more resigned and good humored tolerance for the vagaries of scholarly opinion. The line to be followed by a university that wishes to safeguard intellectual integrity and still make a contemporary contribution to society is not easy to define; it would be far easier if all political leaders could display Robert Kennedy's understanding and his generosity of spirit.

It was in honor of John Fitzgerald Kennedy that he helped Harvard create a living memorial, dedicated to the kind of public service in which he so deeply believed. And now the Kennedy School of Government will serve as well to perpetuate the memory of Robert Francis Kennedy. Harvard and the nation — indeed the world as a whole — will long mourn his loss.

I WAS not a close personal associate of Robert Kennedy although I have often seen word in the newspapers to the contrary. Serving under him on the floor at the Los Angeles convention in 1960, I remember that I was the only person he addressed as Sir. So it might be more illuminating this afternoon if I were to offer a fragment of testimony of another who knew him well. That was his brother, John F. Kennedy. The story is a small one and has not, I believe, been earlier told.

It was at dinner in Florida a few weeks after the 1960 presidential campaign. Since there was no more favorite topic in the Kennedy family, the campaign was being vigorously refought. I ventured the suggestion that its high point had been the prompt and simultaneous response of both brothers to the jailing of Martin Luther King — something which had occurred not long before the election. The President-elect picked up the comment.

"Like all great political strategies, it was accidental and uncoordinated," he said. "Each of us behaved in character. I telephoned Mrs. King. Bobby moved in on the authorities to get her husband out of jail."

The President was perhaps unfair to himself but right on his brother. Bob Kennedy was a man of quick indignation, and of quick response. His response was not alone to injustice under law which arouses the more reputable forms of anger. It was to economic deprivation and racial deprivation and it came with a special force where these afflicted the young. In such matters, response is not always convenient. It involves the discomforts of action.

This instinct for action accounted, I have always thought, for one part of Kennedy's reputation. In our day, we honor, above all, the men who are able to grace extreme social convenience with high moral purpose. Even the better universities sometimes show talent in this regard. By such standards, those like Kennedy, who wish to do something, are bound to seem aggressive, at least until after they are dead.

Indeed often when I read about Robert Kennedy, I wondered if the humorless, self-centered man there described could bear any relation to the one I knew. Could it be that he was the least known public figure of our time? Could this be the price for action against the social convenience? For he was, his friends all knew, amused and amusing. He found great gaiety, and rich, rewarding irony in his own relation to life and politics. And so far from being self-centered, he was the most warmly compassionate of men. But now we know that he was known. All could see it in the faces of the men and women, and especially the youngsters who lined the track all the way from New York to Washington. All saw it in one crudely lettered sign held up by Negro children on the Baltimore platform. It said, "We loves you, Bobby." There is an instinct that tells the people who need a friend who is a friend.

TODAY I speak for those who never met Bobby Kennedy but for whom he was very much alive. We were offered the Bobby of the press and the Bobby of the campaign leaflets, but we perceived more. Behind the commentator's opinion and the campaigner's image, we felt a man who was real.

In him, we saw a pragmatic politician, but sometimes we called him ruthless. In him, we saw idealism, but sometimes we called him opportunistic. In him, we saw the will and the vigor to attack the problems which he saw, but sometimes we called him ambitious.

We could agree with him or argue with him, support him or work for his opponents. Yet always he was one of us. We listened to him; we worked for him; and we believed in him.

Bobby Kennedy saw the world as we see it. He shared our humanity. He loved as we love. He felt the suffering which we feel. He hated the war which we hate. He saw that this was a revolutionary world with promises and dreams to fulfill, and he planned as we plan. Bobby was our companion, though distant, our friend, though we never met him.

Some of us were disenchanted with what we have alternately labelled "The Establishment" or "The System." For the disaffected, Bobby was a viable hope because he combined our ideals with the system's way. Through his commitment and his ambition, his dream and his style, he would make concerned activism possible through established channels.

Bobby was hope for divided America. He could speak for the poor, the blacks, and the young while dealing with the affluent, the whites, and the over-thirty on their terms. The assassin's bullet struck not only our candidate — it struck the divided Americans whom he sought to reconcile and represent.

It would be easy and an excuse to say that the dream died with the man. Bobby is dead, and our hope in his dream momentarily falters, but we will continue. We mourn his absence, but we rejoice that we witnessed the life of Robert Francis Kennedy, a human being.

— PETER A. GAGLIARDI

I V

THE LAST TIME I saw Robert Kennedy was the afternoon before his television debate, in a big square room at the top of the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco, with the sun flooding in across the Golden Gate. He was curled up on a couch in a characteristic attitude, listening intently to the people grouped around him. He was always a good listener. He listened patiently and purposefully, as a good student, in order to increase his capacity to do what he believed needed to be done in the world.

He was extraordinarily open to new ideas. He used them in his own work, and he passed them on freely and eagerly to others who might use them too. The idea of community action first found its way into government through him when he was Attorney General, before the poverty program was even conceived. And the idea of federal incentives for private enterprise to take in the unemployed and the underemployed has found the fullest and the most painstaking expression in his work as a Senator.

What Robert Kennedy added to an idea was a vivid concern for making it happen. His unique contribution grew out of his awareness of the gap between the proposal and its execution, and his determination to bridge that gap. When confronted by a problem, his constant question was "What can I do about it?", and he was never satisfied until he had a positive answer.

His ability to listen and his capacity to use what he heard made him a rewarding student. But he was also a great teacher. And his first pupil was always himself. He never schooled anyone more rigorously. Events conspired with him to make that schooling painful but effective so that he continued to grow in understanding and in wisdom as long as he lived. He loved to quote Aeschylus: "In our sleep, pain that cannot forget falls drop by drop upon the heart, and in our despair, against our will, comes wisdom through the awful grace of God."

He taught those around him by example and by quiet questioning. What he taught best were the lessons of individual growth and maturity, and everyone who worked with him came away having discovered new capacities within himself.

Like every great teacher, he taught many whom he never saw or spoke with. The power of his words reached across the country and across the world, carrying a lesson of concern and commitment to the afflicted and the rejected.

His teaching, like all great teaching, was suffused with passion. It was a passion for excellence and against bombast and shoddiness and cruelty and injustice. It found expression when he told the American people that it was "unacceptable" that children should go hungry in the United States today; it was "unacceptable" that an education should not be freely available to those who are qualified; it was "unacceptable" that we should, as if by divine right, select villages in Asia for destruction.

His sense of outrage was very near the surface. It responded particularly to instances of overbearing conduct by powerful groups and individuals at the expense of the powerless. I remember riding with him in a taxi into New York City late at night through the streets of Spanish Harlem, and asking him about the satisfactions of public office. He swept his arm around the bleak prospect and replied, "If only I could do more."

Yeats' epitaph on Jonathan Swift fits Robert Kennedy:

"[He] has sailed into his rest;
Savage indignation there
Cannot lacerate his breast.
Imitate him if you dare,
World besotted traveller; he Served human liberty."

But for those of us who loved him, and who were the beneficiaries of his talent for friendship and for love, he is best remembered in his own words, spoken after the death of his friend, Martin Luther King:

[10]

"Let us dedicate ourselves to what the Greeks wrote so many years ago: to tame the savageness of man and make gentle the life of this world."

V

A LOT of things don't seem to matter very much right now.

Bob Kennedy was a friend, a good friend and a strong one, but what friends feel we leave to their own thoughts.

Whether he was driving or driven, we can leave to the historians — and so with other aspects of his complex, deeply interesting personality.

Whether he could have been nominated for the Presidency in this year — something I doubt and so I think did he — we can leave to the soothsayers.

What he would have done inside the Presidency had he got there — how above all else he would have sought to end the war — we can leave to the makers of myths. There is no means of knowing and it does not matter now.

What matters — what at least I find impelling — are the faces in the crowds along the railroad tracks last Saturday. In my own incidental exposures to our public life, I have never seen a spectacle more moving or more meaningful.

At every station and every crossroads, lining overpasses, crowding bridges, all the way from Newark to suburban Washington, we passed silent, serious, absorbed, and concerned people.

Their faces, their stances, their patience — some must have waited five hours — these were almost uniform in the expression of one purpose. They were there, it seems, in the words of a sign, hand-lettered, held up proudly by three kids along the tracks, they were there to say "Goodbye, Bobby."

The mood of those quiet, patient people evokes all that we have read about the crowds which waited patiently for Lincoln's train a century ago. But there is one striking difference between the people Saturday and those who waited to pay last respects to Lincoln. Then we had apparently, by all accounts, a great cross-section of Americans. Now, this time, we had by all appearances, by every sign of face and dress, primarily the urban poor, predominantly the ghetto poor.

Surely more than half — by some proportion I don't know — more than half those faces were black.

Thus visually, impressionistically, we have a confirmation of the stories from the campaign trail in Indiana and in Omaha and in Los Angeles:

Bob Kennedy had won a Constituency.

He had become what the historians may some day call the first Urban Populist. From the streets of Bedford-Stuyvesant to the streets of Watts, he had become a Representative.

If this is so — I think it is — that train ride offered overwhelming signs of it — then we can measure Bob's accomplishment by the size of the gap his passing leaves in our national life. Among our institutions, within the circle of our politicians, white and black, where is there now a Representative for Bob's Constituency?

For he had grasped the central point that the dissenters in this country have been making: Namely, that our institutions — our parties, legislatures, civil services, our unions, corporations, banks, even our universities — are far too little open to the poor, offer far fewer means of access and advantage to the northern ghetto dweller — or the California grape picker — than middle-class Americans have dreamed of or can readily believe.

And grasping this, Bob sought to make himself a means of access, a communicator, and a doer.

He sought power for their purposes.

He was not moved to be charitable; he was moved to be political. He acted out of conscience and concern, but he acted to gain power through politics. If he found a constituency outside the system, he sought to represent it in the system, to force its needs upon the system, through the system.

And we have no one on the scene to take his place.

The gap left by his passing is a big one, but he made it. In that there lies encouragement for us. He lived by the belief that individuals can make a difference, that individual will can be imposed on situations, that a man can matter if he mobilizes all his effort, focusses his mind and stamina and influence, holds nothing back.

I think Bob had no naive confidence that effort on his part could guarantee success, but I think he had enormous confidence that effort, focussed effort, could impose upon the world some share of the conditions making for success — and thus could move us forward — and those crowds along the railroad vindicate his confidence.

No man has lived his life in vain if he can leave that testimony for the rest of us.

He was one individual, yet he did make a difference. He made a dent on the world.

What he did, other men can do — there lies our hope — provided each can bring himself to act in Bob's way, the way of those extraordinary brothers: Putting it out, putting it all out, holding nothing back.

The campaign crowds would call to Bob: "Tell it like it is!" He did.

I want you to know how much all of us who were involved in the Kennedy funeral appreciate your great help during that sad event. I know that we bothered you unmercifully during that busy day, but you always responded graciously to our requests for help.

The funeral was a difficult occasion for all of us, but we were able to come through it only because of the understanding, sympathy and support of people such as yourself.

Robert Francis Kennedy was a passionate man and aroused the passions of others. Those of us who had the privilege of working closely with him felt passionately about him.

He was the rare man who could inspire the love - not simply the loyalty - of other men. And for loving him, we liked ourselves the better. As Burke Marshall has said, he brought out the best in each of us. I would only add that we knew it. He made us feel our own capacities without superimposing his own.

All who worked with Bobby in the Department of Justice look back on that time as a unique and privileged experience. Few of us had previously known him at all - yet within a remarkably short period of time he created the conviction that we were a part of something important, something decent, right and professional -- and also fun. We became aware of his courage, his compassion, his curiosity and his humor, and, in a wonderful way, it became our ^{own} end not simply his. That was his great gift as a leader.

Most of what he accomplished as Attorney General was the product of concern for those less fortunate than himself. His compassion was not charity, not noblesse oblige. It was a sense that the Department of Justice was a Department of Justice, not a department of prosecution; that all people must have a fair chance; that power must never be abused; that there was a right and a wrong even when it wasn't easy to determine what was right and what was wrong; that there was nothing which could not be achieved if you wanted it enough and if you had the will to do it.

Perhaps the greatest irony of those four years was Bob's reputation for being "ruthless". No adjective could less describe his actions or his personality. He was the least "ruthless" man I have ever known. I cannot explain it other than ^{there} it were those unsympathetic to his objectives who misunderstood -- intentionally or unintentionally -- his determination, his courage and his candor.

As I write the memories crowd each other. The concrete and lasting accomplishments: civil rights, of course, with all the crises and most of all the lack of self-righteousness - or vituperation; justice for the poor, beginning with the Allen Committee and culminating in the Bail program, the Criminal Justice Act, the Office of Criminal Justice, Half-way Houses -- accomplishments which will continue to leave a major mark on our whole legal system; concern with youth, with juvenile delinquency and with the need to give the young a stake, and a confidence in the future; organized crime and the Hoffa cases -- not the ruthless prosecutor but the man determined that evil power and terror must not be permitted to coerce the helpless or corrupt our democracy.

His wonderful sense of humor. John Doar on the telephone in the middle of a crises and Bob asking him why he had missed Father's Day at school. His comment on a presidential statement about equal rights for women -- "I think women should stay at home and raise children." The surprise party for Jim Bennett on his 25th anniversary as head of the prison system, and the cake with the file inside, his final words to me as I headed for "Ole Miss" -- "If things get rough, don't worry about yourself; the President needs a moral issue." And a thousand other examples.

Bob felt deeply and with dedication about political issues; yet I think, in a way, he hated politics. He was essentially shy and he had to drive himself to do what one had to do as a public figure. He did it well, but ^{it did not come easily.} ~~he drove himself to do~~ it. He took from it more satisfaction than enjoyment.

One final quality -- a genuine love for children. I remember the parties for children he started at the Justice Department which will, I know, be another permanent memorial to him. But that was not his reason; he simply liked having children -- his own and others -- around and taking pleasure.

A newsman, once, telling a funny story about his son stealing a cigar and getting sick -- told humorously and getting laughter from all except Bobby. Bob, at the end of the story, asked this important question: "How is he feeling?"

My youngest child, Anne, watching the memorial film of Bob shown at the convention. I asked her if she remembered Bobby. She answered, "He sent me roses in the hospital."

Dear Ted:

I apologize for this tardy reply to your letter of June 14 about the nature of a permanent living memorial to Bob. Part of the reason for the delay is that I have not really been able to come up with any ideas that seem to me to be quite right.

I agree with the general principles expressed in your letter. These seem to point to some sort of youth center concept, located in a slum area, and I find it hard to find any special idea which would distinguish it from centers which already exist.

I do have a few ideas. I think that if you want to give an opportunity for voluntary participation it is important to try to connect any such center with a university or universities so that you can build in a continuing basis of voluntary participation by both faculty members and students. I would be inclined to suggest that the principal point of attention be concentrated on efforts to enrich educational opportunity and prepare high school students for college and job opportunities, particularly the former. It would seem to me that it might be possible to set up a center for high school age boys and girls and plan activities there which would supplement their educational opportunities in a variety of ways. This would and should include some emphasis on physical activities and sports in something more than a typical urban center way; wouldn't it be possible, for example, to include occasional experiences in physical activity not generally associated with cities, such as walking trips or some exposure to unpopulated areas.

More importantly, I would think such a center should be aimed at exposing young people to a supplementary course, taught on a voluntary basis which could improve their opportunities for college education. I realize, in suggesting this, I cut out a great many people. But it seems to me that governmental programs will be largely geared to technical training and improvement opportunities, and there is something to be said for an effort to pick up those who can move on to higher education. In addition, concentrating on this segment is likely to enlist over a longer period of time the enthusiasm of existing universities and their potential for voluntary help and also to leave a greater permanence since funds can be used both to help run such a center and to provide for forms of scholarship.

I would tend to try to concentrate on the establishment of one such center in New York City but with a potential of others being established throughout the country, carrying Bob's name and spirit but not necessarily funding--which should be done locally. You might be able to tie these together by funding a sufficient number of college scholarships so as to relate the various centers to one established in New York City.

I realize these ideas are not particularly coherent of well thought out. My effort is to pick out that piece of a huge problem which I think might otherwise be neglected and which I think is manageable by itself. Furthermore, there is something, I think, to be said for a project which would be aimed at developing leaders from the ranks of the poor and disadvantaged.

Perhaps I will get some further ideas.

Sincerely,

Nicholas deB. Katzenbach

Mr. Nicholas Katzenbach

Dear Nick:

I would greatly appreciate it if you could give some thought to the nature of a permanent living memorial that can be established for Bob. It should be neither a shrine nor museum, but rather a memorial that would both preserve and bring action to those matters he was so interested in.

I have only a few general thoughts about this for now.

First, it should be aimed at improving the basic opportunities of the poor and disadvantaged.

Second, it should be something to which people could contribute not only money, but more importantly their time, talents and effort.

Third, it should be something young people would want to identify with and participate in.

Fourth, once established it should be so funded and administered that permanence will be assured.

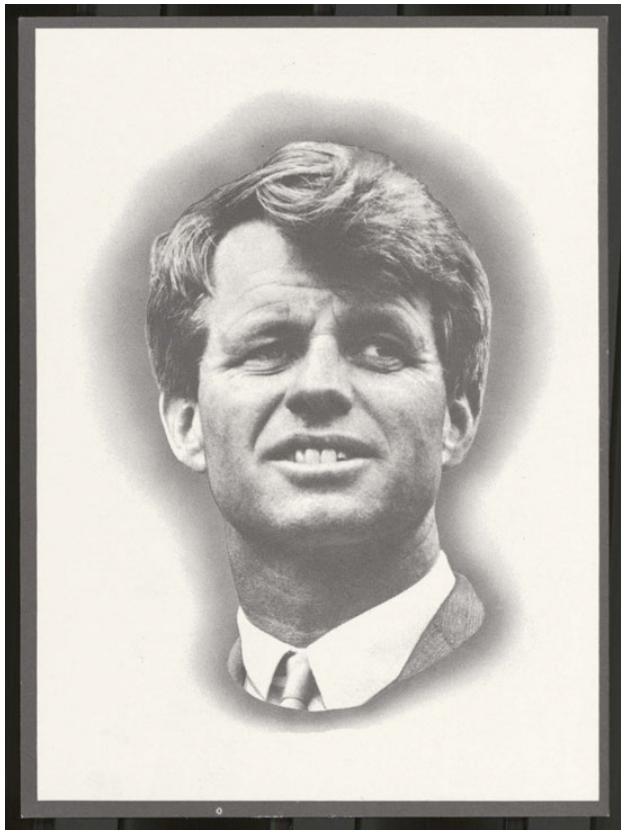

For further elaboration of these ideas as well as suggestions on planning, executing, financing and publicizing, I am looking to you and a few of Bob's other close friends and associates.

Could you send me a memo within the next week that I could go over with Ethel -- and if you wish we could follow up the memo with a telephone conversation.

Thank you for your help on this.

Sincerely,

Edward M. Kennedy

Dear God,

Please take care of him who tried to take care of yours.

"Come, my friends,
Tis not too late to seek a newer world"

—Tennyson, Ulysses

"Aeschylus wrote: 'In our sleep, pain that cannot forget falls drop by drop upon the heart and in our own despair, against our will, comes wisdom through the awful grace of God.'"

"What we need in the United States . . . is love and wisdom and compassion toward one another, and a feeling of justice toward those who still suffer within our own country, whether they be white or they be black.

"Let us dedicate ourselves to what the Greeks wrote so many years ago: to tame the savageness of man and make gentle the life of the world. Let us dedicate ourselves to that, and say a prayer for our country and for our people."

Steve -

We need a final decision on pall bearers at Arlington - Alternatives are:

A - Family - friends carry casket

B - Naval seamen carry casket to gravesite, then retire and are replaced around coffin by family - friends -
I recommend B - The carry is very difficult -
